Reflections

Thoughts For Transformation The Late Rev. LeRoy E. Zemke Living An Inspired Life

Thine, O Lord, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty: for all that is in the heaven and in the earth is thine; thine is the kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as head above all. Both riches and honour come of thee, and thou reignest over all; and in thine hand is power and might; and in thine hand it is to make great, and to give strength unto all. Now therefore, our God, we thank thee, and praise thy glorious name.

1 Chronicles 29: 11 - 13
King James Bible

One of the highest places you can get to is to be independent of the good opinion of other people.

Choose to be in close proximity to people who are empowering, who see the greatness in you, who feel connected to God, and who live a life that gives evidence that Spirit has found a celebration through them.

Wayne Dyer
Everyday Wisdom for Success

Inspiration n.: From the late Latin: inspiratio, from Latin. inspiratus pp. inspirare to blow into or upon, to breathe into; in, on and, to breathe.

1. originally, (a) to breathe or blow upon or into; (b) to infuse (life, etc. into) by breathing.
2. to have an animating effect upon; to influence, stimulate or impel; especially, to stimulate or impel to some creative or effective effort.
3. to cause, guide, communicate or motivate by divine influence; as, God inspired the Scriptures.
4. to arouse or produce (a thought or feeling); as, kindness inspires love.

Websters Unabridged (2nd) Edition,
New 20th Century Dictionary

In a world that is filled with detailed news of incredible accounts of war, “rogue” countries attempting to annihilate their own unwanted citizens, to constant media reports of scandal, widespread dishonesty and murder in countries, cities, families and recently, even in churches, it could appear that there is little in our human world that one can look to for some kind of personal or even more universal inspiration.

The great teachers of the Inner Way say the real/genuine experience of inspiration, personal or even more universal, is something we must seek. It exists around us everywhere, in nature, in the lives of our loved ones, indeed even in our life if we are willing to look and/or to be open or receptive to it. The major difficulty in finding inspiration I suspect, emerges when we get news or information from others or from the very broad world community that’s interpreted in a very limited way or presented in a negative manner. We can do little about what we hear from the outer world. Yet we can choose to view the information we receive from more than one viewpoint. Obviously, it’s an internal decision, indeed.

The one major area of our human nature that we have control over is our thought. We look at our life and the lives of those we know and care about from inside ourselves. Current brain research talks about the multitudinous variety of ways we interpret every kind of information to ourselves. Whether we realize it or not we choose to see it in a personal or specific way. When we add cultural filters, family viewpoints, religious persuasions, racial constructs, let alone what scientists would tell us or have us believe to be specifically true, each arena/area offers profound colorations of our views of our own life.

The great spiritual teachers such as Jesus Christ, the Buddha and others, say we are in charge of our thoughts! Since I, also, believe we are, we can choose how to look at the various circumstances of our life through our choice of words, our internal view or understanding of a situation without blinders or restrictions. However it takes constant practice and more practice to see beyond any one appearance, viewpoint or belief.

Let’s consider an example:

Job loss. What is the “good news” here? Meaningful, focused and intentional, hopefully rewarding work is absolutely necessary in our lives. It supports us, our families and helps us to realize desired goals. A job loss can interrupt our financial flow and obviously can create many serious hardships in every area of our lives.

How then can we find inspiration? How do we uncover something that lifts us beyond our sense of misfortune and difficulty? Where do we or how can we find hope for what is or appears to be a significant loss?

1. Seek the comfort and caring of people, family, friends, acquaintances or professional people. Thoughtful talking with positive and professional people releases fears and helps us to know we are not alone. It gives clear perspective and tends to reveal that we have positive options, even when we feel differently (negative, fearful).

2. Give thanks for what we do have ... an apartment, a car, a home, a spouse, friend or loved ones who can be there for us. Gratitude allows us to see what we already have in our life and thus what is readily available. It enables us to look at all the good, the pluses already in our life. When we look at the famous example of a half empty glass, we choose to see it as half full or half empty. It's an extremely important perception.

3. Focus on the positive; a probable job offering, or a new opportunity. We have learned that what we focus upon expands. So to find inspiration let us look for the possible solutions, positive outcomes for our searches for gainful employment. Even if we do not find immediate work, a favorable attitude is certainly easier to live with, for ourselves as well as family and those who know us. A significant point is this: We need to stay open to life's pulse. When we do, we truly remain in the flow of opportunity. If we stay negative, we internally close off and the various doors of life's opportunities remain closed.

On a larger, more expanded scale, we may not be able to stop war or poverty even though we join community outreach and social reform groups that promise action in government and in the society. If we look about us, in our own society there are thousands of worthy charities and dedicated men/women and children focusing on, inspiring, maybe even noble outreaches. If this group effort inspires us to action in a useful and really viable manner, then I suggest to those who feel called to serve such groups, churches, or social and community efforts to commit to do so. It's a most valuable insight, I suspect that can help us overcome the hurt, anger and sense of loss that a job change or removal can cause.

With inspiration we allow ourselves to be open to life, or spirit in spite of all contrary appearances. We must learn to see that all men, women and children are connected. If we look deeply, we can see the handiwork of God in even the most difficult of circumstances. But it requires us to look or look again to see miracles, ever possible miracles beyond tragedy, trauma or even death.

Living an inspired life is an internal intention. It is very hard to the core work to face criticism, personal and/or verbal attack from professional people, family or friends. When we see suffering in a community devastated by natural disasters, floods, earthquakes, heat waves or the ravages of disease that cannot be stopped, it requires a very deep courage, indeed, to find something in the experience that is within it to enable us to see a larger good or Divine purpose. Yet we know that communities rebuild after incredible destruction such as floods, hurricanes, tornadoes or even a terrifying prospect of death from an infection from disease such as the dreaded Ebola virus. When we find strength to focus on what we can do and not on what we can't, we discover the deeper meaning of inspiration.

Many, many years ago, a dear friend lay dying from an inoperable brain cancer. Her words inspired me then and still do to this day. "I do not know why I have brain cancer but I want my two children and my husband and friends to remember me for my love for them and how I have shown it, rather than how I died." She passed away now 40 years ago. And her words have been an inspiration to me across the years as I have stood with, held prayer vigils and supported hundreds of people who wanted to be remembered for courage, living for a meaningful purpose in a church or their personal community of choice until their last breath.

The challenge of tapping into inspiration is that it requires of each of us to look beyond appearances, beyond the surface. Hardships, even serious or severe hardships, do not define us. They shape us to be revealed as the man or woman we are from the inside out, a child of the Living God.

Near Death Experience (NDE)

Raymond Moody MD PhD

Raymond A. Moody Jr. (born June 30, 1944) is an American philosopher, psychiatrist, physician and author, most widely known for his books about afterlife and near-death experiences (NDE), a term that he coined in 1975 in his best-selling book Life After Life. His research explores personal accounts of subjective phenomena encountered in near-death experiences, particularly those of people who have apparently died but been resuscitated. He has widely published his views on what he terms near-death-experience

An NDE, or near-death experience, is a profound and often life-changing event that occurs when a person comes close to death, typically involving vivid, subjective sensations such as out-of-body feelings, a life review, moving through a tunnel, or encountering a bright light. While most experiences are positive, some can be distressing. Research into NDEs is a field dedicated to studying these experiences in medicine, psychology, and psychiatry.

Dr. Moody is a retired psychiatrist, philosophy professor, author of 15 books, most famous of which was "Life After Life".

He met his wife, Cheryl at WTOG-TV in September 1992. They married a year later and adopted 2 children.

Dr Moody will be speaking at the morning service and will be giving a 2 hour workshop in the afternoon on Near Death Experience.

The title of the morning service is: Life After Life
